The Holocaust was a watershed event in human history: an act of murder and violence the Nazis and their accomplices unleashed against the Jewish people. Death awaited Jews, and the path to this denouement was paved with ghastly violence. In certain respects, however, women, men and children followed different paths to death. In this exhibition, we attempt to reveal the human story that lurks behind the historical account of what happened. Within this story, we chose to speak of the Jewish victims and create space for the unique voice of the woman among them.

Women in the Holocaust applied their minds to a place that deprived them of their minds; brought strength to a place where they had no strength. In a place where they and their families had no right to live, they marched all the way to death and invested every additional moment of life with meaning. It is these women's voices that we wish to sound and whose stories to tell.

Free Admission. All are welcome. No registration needed. For further information, please contact Ms. Evelyn Lo via evelynlo@hku.hk
